

Prevent a cat-astrophe

Desex your cat

Desexing is the single most effective way to prevent unwanted litters and reduce the number of homeless cats.

Desexing also improves your cat's health and reduces aggression. It's a win-win for your pet, you and your community.

Cats can start breeding from as young as 4 months. Unwanted litters can result in more strays and increased kittens and cats in pounds and shelters.

If you care for a stray:

- consider taking ownership and getting it desexed
- there are programs that offer discounted desexing for cats in your care.

The Cat Protection Society of NSW, Animal Welfare League NSW and RSPCA NSW have information available on desexing, adoption and other ways you can help cats in your community.
